

Cultural Resource Management

Cultural Resource Management is the professional field devoted to the treatment of archaeological sites and historic structures. CRM specialists guide their clients through the process of complying with the state and federal regulations that are designed to protect these resources.

Why PS&S?

- 1 Our cultural resource professionals each have over 30 years' experience in the field. Knowing the ins and outs of the compliance process and maintaining long-standing working relationships with regulatory agency officials helps us avoid project delays and additional costs.
- 2 We get it right the first time. By choosing the appropriate scope of study and working to a high standard, we minimize the possibility of an unsuccessful agency review that could add weeks or months to a project schedule.
- 3 Our client's best interest is our best interest. Our job is to interpret the cultural resource regulations as they apply to your project and find an efficient and cost-effective route through the approval process.

The PS&S Difference

As part of an integrated architecture and engineering firm, PS&S' cultural resource management practice is motivated to resolve issues with archaeological sites and historic buildings, not exploit them. We offer creative solutions, not boilerplate scopes and reports. We currently maintain a rate of agency concurrence in excess of 95% - saving our clients from months of permitting delays and costly change orders.
